Story of the week

The shaliach to Detroit, Reb Berel Shemtov, kept on trying to convince him, but to no avail "I am an honest person," the man kept on insisting. "I cannot take upon myself to don tefillin every single day for the rest of my life. I am not psychologically ready for such an endless undertaking. On principal, I will not make a commitment I cannot keep."

Seeing that he would not budge, Reb Berel suggested he discuss it with the Rebbe.

When the man came out of the Rebbe's room, he looked relieved. He asked the Shliach to please place an order for the tefillin, so he will have his own pair to use.

Some years later, after he had been laying tefillin without a break, Reb Berel gathered the courage to ask him what had happened with his 'honesty' and the 'undertaking'. "The Rebbe agreed with me," he answered. "The Rebbe said... I have Saturdays off!"
